Wig and Carrier.

Lady, there is one truth, and one alone.
Which to the lover of the beautifully
In person, or in manners stands supreme,
Is that that good alone, in its fair form,
Is beauty. All else perishes. The eye
Of light, with its bewitching fire; the brow;
The cheek, the lip, the graceful form; all the Fair symmetry that's held so dear, in man Or woman, must be for the eternal law.

Of women, again, by the eternal law
Of the Creator's power, which moulds and shapes
All outward forms from inward faculties.
At last he made to correspond to the Inwardly spiritual. Then one only thing—
When outward forms have crumbled in dust,
And matter's indistinguishable earth:
Heide all that he has cherished out—something then
Of all we had admired shall save the throne
Of God.

To assume this mystic grace. Remember, lady,
It is CHARACTER.
When virtue's plastic spirit hath inwrought,
And love's sweet sympathy, and tenderness,
And melting charity for others' weal,
And patience, gentleness, and humble trust,
Have all conspired to fix the angelic form—
To shape the countenance, to light the eyes,
To give the curve and all the tincture.

To this immortal and this living sculpture
Of heaven's divinest work—Oh! that all that Wherein, and upon, and stars decay, and time Itself expires, and pain alone takes on,
In the dark regions of eternity,
This shape and Man of dread deformity,
This should forever freshen and delight,
The virtue's own and high prerogative,
The very essence of divinité beauty,
Such as the

The Two Homes.

It is New Year's day--that glad, bright occasion, breaking for a little the crust of worldliness, and calling forth the latent good within.

"Happy New Year" has been successfully shrouded by sundry little vogues, and older ones too, in your substantial mansion, gratefully breaking the morning stiffness, and as the day wears on there is heard over and under the gratifying exclamation, as hidden in some cunningly-disguised corner:

Stranger fingers, too, have been at work; with the ringing bell comes one, and another offering, telling of numerous, and warm hearted friends. The evening hour brings a circle of youthful companions, who fill the brilliant lighted rooms; bright faces, graceful forms, and hearts up-beat with eager, happy now, and feasting on dark cloud. In the future, the evening is full of gaiety. Tab-e-ox entirely, the scene, the action "hop" cloaks its satisfactions, and our family seek repose abundantly satisfied, with the pleasure pertaining to the supposition of worldly prosperity, the type of many households basking in wealth, a luxury, in grandeur, distinct from our questions of lock sister, complete the group. An air of exclusiveness pervades the apartment, though it cannot hide the indications of extreme poverty. It was not always thus; while the father lived, his family were in competence, their society sought, and the now invalid daughter desired for her more than ordinary mental endowment; but in the train of events fol-

Girls' Boarding Schools.—The Medical Journal is down upon the fashionable Protestant nunnery or priory, commonly called boarding schools. Many parents regard these schools as almost essential to a furnished education, and girls passing into their teens look forward to them as an earthly paradise. The journal finds little to recommend, and much

A few weeks ago, we were called upon to a young girl suffering from general debility, neuralgic pains, vertigo, and headache—had just returned from a boarding school where she spent only a little, before her health, previously good, failed.
On inquiry, we found the nature of the lunch, and from 3 to 6 are allowed to walk or play in the courtyard. From 6 to 8 they have dinner, and then study from 8 to 9 when they are to bed.

For the young, growing and tired school girl is divided into periods of 1 1/2 hours for sleep, three for meals, three for class, and ten for study. Every person over full adult age needs eight or nine hours
